1. The firm of Friemann & Wolf in Zwickau, Saxony, tried to produce dust masks and gas protection apparatus during 1950. According to the plans, the intended apparatus was purely industrial equipment for the protection of workers. Attempts in this direction have, however, been given up as being too expensive. A man by the name of Slonina, a German national, handled the matter for the DDR officials. Nothing is being done in this direction at the present time.
